

CALF LIVESTOCK STEWARDSHIP POLICY

CALF CODE: CALF is dedicated to connecting people to agricultural through authentic educational programs, community projects and special events. We are committed to creating an atmosphere that promotes the work ethic and rural, agricultural values demonstrated by John and Bea Lowell (CALF's Founders) throughout their lives. CALF Kids are expected to conduct the daily care of their livestock in a manner that exemplifies discipline, responsibility, excellence and cooperation.

The CALF Kid program is a community project that provides 4-H and FFA members that do not have their own livestock facilities a place to raise livestock projects. Stewardship of your livestock at CALF includes the following values:

- Be cooperative – Your cooperative demeanor and relationship other participants, CALF's Board of Directors and employees, and visitors to CALF's Lowell Ranch is imperative.
- Be an ambassador – CALF conducts numerous educational and outreach programs at the Lowell Ranch. If you are caring for your livestock when one of these programs is occurring please take time to greet participants and answer any questions they may have. You are not only an ambassador for CALF but also for 4-H/FFA and the livestock industry.
- Take pride – The appearance of your pen and livestock says a lot about you and is also a reflection on CALF, 4-H and FFA. Specifically you are required to:
 - Provide clean, fresh water to livestock at all times.
 - Consistently clean and maintain livestock, pen and surroundings.
 - Never leave your livestock project restrained unattended – this includes being tied to a fence, in a blocking chute, or fitting stand.
 - Respect your fellow CALF Kids belongings, feed, and equipment.
 - Take your time driving in and out of the ranch. In other words, drive slowly. There is a lot going on at CALF and we don't want people or animals to get hurt.

CALF's Lowell Ranch is open from sunup to sundown. Alcohol, drugs and smoking are prohibited.
